ADVANCING EXCELLENCE IN Practice & Policy: HIGHLIGHTING SUCCESSFUL STRATEGIES TO ADDRESS THE NEEDS OF CHILDREN, YOUTH, AND FAMILIES

Join policy and practice colleagues in Washington, DC, from March 29-31 for CWLA's 2017 National Conference, Advancing Excellence in Practice and Policy: Highlighting Successful Strategies to Address the Needs of Children, Youth, and Families. This conference is a prime opportunity for the Administration, influential service providers, leaders, advocates, youth, and families to meet and promote excellence in policy and practice around today's critical topics and their effects on children, youth, and families.

The 2017 National Conference will take place at the Hyatt Regency Capitol Hill, just a ten-minute walk from the United States Capitol. This year's Congressional session will be one of the most consequential in more than two decades, with leaders in Washington seeking major changes within the first 100 days of the new administration. Debates are happening now about changes and budget cuts to health care, including the Affordable Care Act, Medicaid, Medicare, and nutrition programs; the Social Services Block Grant; child welfare services; early childhood and child care funding; and many other human services.

On the conference's opening day, CWLA will hold a policy seminar that will bring together key policy experts and leaders from Capitol Hill and Washington think tanks. You will have access to the latest information, data, and facts on the first 100 days of the new administration and the changes to come.

Whether you attend our 2017 conference to participate in workshops and seminars, hear plenary speakers, or join in the policy debate, you will leave Washington better informed. Join us to make your voice heard here in Washington, DC, then use your acquired knowledge to effect change when you go back home. Join us as a CWLA National Conference Sponsor and Vendor to enjoy three full days with hundreds of the most influential experts and service providers for America's children, youth, and families.

PLENARY SPEAKERS

Allison Metz

Allison Metz, PhD, is a developmental psychologist, Director of the National Implementation Research Network (NIRN), and Senior Scientist at the Frank Porter Graham Child Development Institute at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Dr. Metz specializes in the implementation, mainstreaming, and scaling of evidence to achieve social impact for children and families in a range of human service and education areas, with an emphasis on child welfare and early childhood service contexts. Dr. Metz's work focuses in several key areas, including the development of evidence-informed practice models; the use of effective implementation and scaling strategies to improve the application of evidence in service delivery systems; and the development of coaching, continuous quality improvement, and sustainability strategies.

Josh Shipp

Josh Shipp is an author, global youth empowerment expert, and acclaimed speaker. A former at-risk foster kid turned youth advocate, he is renowned for Teen Trouble, his documentary TV series on A&E that followed his groundbreaking work with teens.

He is the author of the national bestseller The Teen's Guide to World Domination and was listed on Inc. Magazine's 30 under 30 list. He helps adults understand teens and teens understand themselves. Josh had a challenging childhood and bounced from foster home to foster home until a handful of caring adults reached out to him. He now strives to pass his knowledge on and be that caring adult for kids like him. Josh says, "Every kid is ONE caring adult away from being a success story."

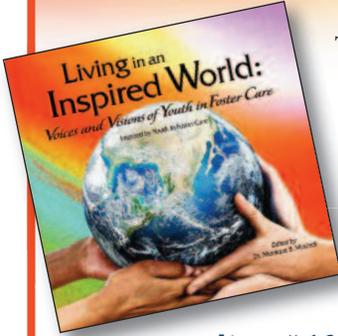

Monique Mitchell

Monique Mitchell, PhD, CT, is an interdisciplinary professor in the College of Social Work at the University of South Carolina and an international scholar in the Enhancing Life Project. In partnership with the South Carolina Department of Social Services (SCDSS), Dr. Mitchell served for six years as the state research director for the National Youth in Transition Database (NYTD) data collection and the Voices and Visions of SC Youth in Transition longitudinal research study, exploring the experiences, perspectives, and outcomes of youth transitioning out of foster care. During this time, she developed a nationally recognized methodology that has helped South Carolina and other states approach youth with sensitivity, establish meaningful relationships with them, and ensure that they are being heard. Dr. Mitchell is the editor of CWLA Press's forthcoming book Living in an Inspired World: Voices and Visions of Youth in Foster Care.

Living in an Inspired World: Voices and Visions of Youth in Foster Care

Edited by Dr. Monique B. Mitchell

This new CWLA title consists of 365 days of inspirational messages for youth throughout the world. The intention of this book is to affirm that youth in foster care, and all youth, are competent, capable catalysts of change.

SUPER SESSIONS

Adoption

This super session will focus on strategies to strengthen adoptions in areas of greatest need, including race, diversity, and older and special needs youth. In addition to highlighting strategies to achieve successful adoptions, participants will learn about post-permanence approaches that can sustain adoptions. Issues to be addressed include both pre- and post-placement services and interventions to address challenges that may threaten the “permanence” of the adoption, including mental health needs and sibling and other familial attachment relationships.

Collaboration

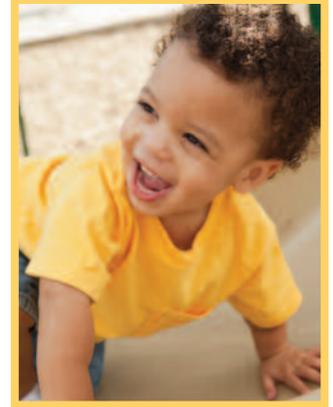

This super session will explore collaborative and integrative approaches used by a wide variety of agencies and their community stakeholders to create innovative services and supports that give children, youth, and families the best opportunity for success. These collaborative efforts range from prevention-related initiatives to ensure infants and young children have the best possible start to interventions for special populations of children and youth who are part of the child welfare system. Information on these successful collaborative efforts and the effective strategies used will be shared, along with lessons learned.

Research

This super session will feature presentations that illustrate some of the key topics from the new special issue of CWLA's peer-reviewed Child Welfare journal about ways to improve the use of research within child welfare. The super session will be facilitated by Kim DuMont, co-editor of the special issue. Generating the research that is required to establish an evidence base, selecting the evidence base so that it meets local needs, and building the technical infrastructure and funding required to establish an evidence base are some of the topics that will be addressed.

Youth Development

Many youth involved in the child welfare system transition to independence and adulthood without command of the life skills, adequate supports, and preparation for challenges faced by young adults. This super session focuses on successful programs and strategies that engage and assure that youth have what they need to achieve educational and employment success, secure and maintain stable and adequate housing, build financial capability, and develop self-advocacy skills. The session also provides an opportunity to hear and learn about effective program designs, collaborative strategies within and across organizations, and approaches specifically designed to engage and create opportunities for youth competency and development.

Resource Parent Development and Support

This super session will feature successful strategies to develop and support resource (foster and adoptive) parents. In addition to presenting strategies to find and develop families who have the ability, resources, and willingness to be team members in child protection and the trauma-informed care of children, creative approaches to ongoing development and support of resource families will be highlighted. The importance of implementing a model of practice for the development and sustained service of resource parents, as well as positive outcomes for children, youth, and families, will be demonstrated.

Homelessness and Housing

This super session will address the link between lack of stable housing and contact with the child welfare system. It will include a presentation of select projects that are designed to increase housing stability for fragile families and a review of policy and system changes required to address this issue.

Leadership

In this workshop, participants will explore examples of how leaders from child and family organizations made the decision to collaborate in order to better respond to the needs of children, youth, and families. The examples address collaboration at the program and system levels. The super session is designed to give agency leaders the opportunity to discuss strategies that will help them position themselves and their organizations for continued sustainability, relevance, and impact.

Poverty

This super session will provide an opportunity to hear from a panel of leaders about the interrelationship between poverty, race/ethnicity, and child abuse and neglect, and to develop strategies to respond. The session will explore what we know about the impact of poverty on children and communities, the relationship between poverty and neglect and the disproportionate number of children of color in the child welfare system.

Implementation/Research

This super session will explore lessons learned from multi-year, evidence-based projects that were designed to strengthen families that are vulnerable. Issues related to scaling, fidelity, and service quality will be discussed in the session.

Youth Engagement

This interactive super session will examine a number of key issues in child welfare through the lens of young professionals with lived experience. Topics discussed will include normalcy for youth in care, trauma, youth and alumni in transition, permanency, and post-permanency. The intent is to improve the engagement of youth in their well-being and lifelong connections.

Workforce

This super session will focus on successful strategies to build and sustain a competent child welfare workforce. Strategies that have proven effective in strategic aspects of workforce development will be presented, including: equipping the workforce to promote cultural responsiveness; implementing evidence-based practices to respond to the impact of trauma; building leadership capacity of new child welfare workers; and building and sustaining teams that increase staff retention, satisfaction, and performance.

Immigration

This super session will address the challenges, effective strategies, and best practices for culturally responsive services for unaccompanied children and refugee minors in three key areas: outreach to and preparation of the sponsors to ensure effective care for and integration of the children; working with those who enter child welfare; and best practices and resources to ensure the protection of the children who are ordered or voluntarily decide to return home. This will be an interactive session with case studies and opportunities for brainstorming solutions to challenges experienced by participants.

Human Trafficking

An unknown number of children and youth are trafficked for sex and/or forced labor, and human trafficking has become increasingly present within the United States and other countries. This super session will focus on the trafficking crisis within the United States and its effect on children and youth. You will learn of successful collaborations and strategies that assist exploited children and youth. The session will also provide multidisciplinary approaches with the courts, attorneys, government agencies, and community partners working toward the survival and healing of these youth.

Finance/Funding

This super session will examine strategies to address needed child welfare services, and to advance and fund these services. Approaches and strategies from four efforts will be highlighted. These presentations will help provide perspective for a review and discussion of recent federal funding, its history, and the future outlook for child welfare financing.

Identification of Children Prenatally Exposed to Alcohol and Other Drugs: Impact of Policy and Practice

Prenatal exposure to alcohol and other drugs can have serious, detrimental, and lifelong effects. Evidence indicates that children in the welfare system with such exposures are often not identified or misdiagnosed. Identification of children with prenatal exposure can be a complex process, but it can be made significantly easier when child welfare agencies and their partners focus on specific policy and practice approaches. This interactive workshop will review the relevant effects of prenatal exposure to alcohol and other drugs, present findings of a study looking at policies and practice, and provide suggestions for improving identification of affected children.

Improving Postsecondary Outcomes for College Students from Foster Care

This workshop includes three abbreviated presentations that address a range of strategies for improving postsecondary educational outcomes for foster youth, including a descriptive analysis of the 22 states that have implemented tuition waivers for students from foster care; the use of the Impact Database (IDB) to meet the real and urgent needs of college-bound foster youth and how IDB can inform efforts to measure the impact of policy and investments; and the uniqueness of a Youth In Transition (YIT) grant housed in a university's social work department and the related skill set to address the issues and concerns of YIT.

Utilizing Parent Mentors to Enhance Child Services & Increase Parent Engagement

This interactive workshop will allow participants to learn how to effectively utilize Parent Mentors to enhance child and family services and increase parent engagement. Presenters will discuss how Parent Mentors can work with parents to develop and adhere to a Children's Service Plan, which outlines child development, child needs, and family goals. Presenters will also share how the development of Children's Service Plans can increase parent engagement, as it allows parents to begin receiving necessary supports as they prepare for reunification and learn how best to navigate the reunification process.

Improving Child Welfare Outcomes for Opioid-Using Families with Medication-Assisted Treatment in the Sobriety Treatment and Recovery Team (START) Program

In a recently published study, the use of medication-assisted treatment (MAT) was found to improve child welfare outcomes for families in the Sobriety Treatment and Recovery Team (START) program in Kentucky. START is an evidence-informed CPS program for families with parental substance use and child abuse/neglect that helps parents obtain recovery and keeps children in the home when it is safe and possible. START partners with addiction treatment providers for quick access to quality services, including MAT. This workshop will describe the study and provide ideas for effectively using MAT with CPS-involved families, providing copies of the study and a MAT protocol.

Juvenile Justice Reform in Indian Country: Best Practices and Programs toward Increasing Use of Non-Detention Alternatives

This workshop will summarize the work of the Association on American Indian Affairs (AAIA), under the auspices of the Annie E. Casey Foundation's Juvenile Detention Alternatives Initiatives (JDAI), to address the disproportionate rate of Native American youth in detention. Presenters will describe the findings of AAIA's research about best practices and programs in Indian Country that have proven effective in addressing this important issue, as well as the challenges that tribal governments, communities, families, and youth continue to face. Discussion of opportunities for improving outcomes for Native youth will also be discussed.

Innovation in Managed Care: The Georgia Families 360 Model

Managed Care Organizations (MCO) have worked with members, families, advocates, and their communities to develop innovative programs that improve outcomes for members and efficiently coordinate services. In addition to coordination, the scope of experience and role of MCOs has made it possible to provide additional supports for our members, including resources for the judiciary, schools, and providers. This workshop will explore some of the innovative programs Anthem has developed collaboratively to improve the quality of life for members aged 0–25 in foster care programs and will help attendees learn more about opportunities to expand the collaborative in their own communities.

An Organization’s Transformative Change Approach to Promoting Equity, Inclusion, and Justice While Addressing Disproportionality and Disparity of Child Welfare Services to Black Children, Youth, and Families

Having Black child welfare-involved children live with their parents, in their own communities, is key to advancing excellence given child welfare’s 40-year history of disproportionality and disparity of services to this client group. To tackle this issue, a large, urban child welfare agency is employing an evidence-informed, community change model, using an equity, inclusion, anti-racism lens. This workshop details the vertical and horizontal agency barriers and levers used to elicit both small and large gains. The presentation outlines the transformative elements that have underpinned sustainable change related to reducing the over-representation of Black youth in care.

Challenges of Integrating, Assimilating, and Sustaining Responsible Fatherhood within the Child Welfare System of Care: The Philadelphia Model

This workshop will emphasize the importance of fathers in advancing child well-being and explore critical components for positioning children-, youth-, and family-focused agencies to expand capacity to improve outcomes, encouraging agency leadership to consider innovative strategies to expand their philosophies, policies, practices, procedures, and protocols to endorse the involvement of fathers as additional supports in the care of their children. The workshop will be led by a former Stoneleigh Foundation Senior

Fellow and supported by research findings resulting from the project, “The Integration of Responsible Fatherhood within Foster Care Service Delivery and Other Children and Youth Servicing Systems.”

Meet Me Where I Am: Meaning-Centered Strategies to Meet the Needs of Children and Youth in Foster Care

Drawing upon a strengths-based approach, this workshop presentation will identify specific ways that children and caregivers in the foster care system can address life’s challenges by engaging in meaning-centered strategies. Participants will explore constructs such as self-discovery; uniqueness; freedom and responsibility; decision-making; self-transcendence; and creative, experiential, and attitudinal experiences. Current child-centered research, professional experiences, and practical advice will be highlighted to illustrate the value and practical application of Logotherapy.

Sharing Responsibility and Resources for Homeless Families: A Head Start, Child Welfare, and Supportive Housing Partnership

This workshop will offer creative ways to combine housing, early childhood education, and supportive services to help reduce the need for child welfare placement and reduce school mobility. The Connection, Inc., has served more than 2,000 child welfare families with permanent housing, supportive services, and access to stable employment for over 20 years. The agency is now working in partnership with Head Start to quickly identify families within Head Start centers using an evidenced-based tool, Quick Risk Assessment for Families to Housing, to meet their housing needs prior to experiencing homelessness. This work is aimed at preventing and reducing homelessness as well as the need for child welfare involvement.

A full list of our 50+ workshop sessions is available at www.cwla.org/Success2017.

POLICY SEMINARS

The Policy Seminars will engage key policy experts and leaders from Capitol Hill and other national think tanks in discussing some of the specific legislative changes your members of Congress are considering. CWLA will bring in key experts on health care, children's programs, nutrition programs, and the budget process. Our panel of experts will discuss policy specifics and what you need to know about how proposed legislative changes will affect the families and the children you work with. You will come away with a clearer understanding of current congressional debate and be empowered to make a difference in 2017.

CAPITOL HILL ACTIVITIES

The CWLA 2017 National Conference will be the first significant gathering of child welfare advocates and professionals on Capitol Hill since the start of the new Congress and administration. This provides an excellent opportunity to deliver a strong, emphatic message that it is unacceptable to eliminate or weaken the child welfare continuum of care, from prevention to permanency.

All conference participants will have access to trainings and briefings on the issues at hand. All relevant materials will be provided, including talking points, position statements, fact sheets, maps, and instructions. Up-to-the-minute updates on the latest status of legislation will be provided.

The conference hotel is only two blocks from the Senate office buildings and just a few minutes' walk from the House buildings. This year, we will take advantage of this proximity by encouraging attendees to schedule Capitol Hill visits throughout the course of the conference rather than restricting them to a single block of time.

TRAINING OPPORTUNITIES: MARCH 31ST

Social Media Training: The Good, the Bad, and the Ugly (10:30 am – 1:30 pm)

Separate registration required

Social media, technology, and the internet have an impact on today's society. Due to experiences of trauma and loss, children and youth in care face increased vulnerability for inappropriate and risky online activity. An examination of the impact of social media and technology, including its influence on young people's perceptions of reality, reveals significant risks for the unaware. This training provides information on areas where children and youth, particularly those in out-of-home care, are increasingly vulnerable and, thus, need proper education and supervision. These topics include internet safety, cyberbullying, media marketing, the impact of music on values and behavior, and desensitization to violence via video games. Risk factors will be identified and realistic strategies to protect youth will be presented.

This training utilizes a variety of learning methods that are aligned with the principles of adult learning. Multiple opportunities will be provided to gather information, share experiences, utilize self-assessment, and practice skills.

Protecting Our Children: Domestic Minor Sex Trafficking Training (3:00 pm – 6:00 pm)

Separate registration required

What is human trafficking—also known as modern-day slavery—and what is domestic minor sex trafficking (DMST)? The biggest concern for those combating human trafficking in the United States is helping U.S.-born youth in DMST. This training will give professionals and caregivers the skills and tools needed to recognize the signs of DMST, and to engage and protect the children involved. The training is interactive and uses scenarios, group discussion, and videos to demonstrate how to address DMST.

The training, based on the CWLA curriculum Protecting Our Children: Domestic Minor Sex Trafficking Training for Out-of-Home Care Professionals, utilizes a train-the-trainer model designed to equip participants to engage others in learning how to identify, report, and prevent DMST in the community at large and in out-of-home-care settings (family foster care, residential facilities, drop-in centers, homeless shelters, juvenile justice settings, aftercare programs).

TRAINING FEES:

With Conference Registration:

One Training (Social Media or Sex Trafficking) – $65
Both Trainings (Social Media and Sex Trafficking) – $100

Without Conference Registration:

One Training (Social Media or Sex Trafficking) – $95
Both Trainings (Social Media and Sex Trafficking) – $165

Visit www.cwla.org/Success2017 for full training details.

DOCUMENTARY FILM: The Face of Kinship

The Face of Kinship is a documentary that explores the riveting stories of four unique kinship caregivers from New York. The lives of these grandparents have been defined by the love and devotion they show to everyone around them, not just to the grandchildren they have opened their homes to. Each caregiver works every day, around the clock, and with little compensation or recognition to succeed at one of the most difficult yet most important jobs in the world: parenting. Universal yet so very remarkable, the unnoticed work of these everyday heroes is finally given the spotlight it deserves.
