Child Neglect, Inequity, & Poverty: Practice Innovations, Concrete Resources and Justice Volume II

New Edition

Edited by Priscilla Day and Katharine Briar-Lawson

Much of child welfare practice involves families who may have low income or be economically insecure. While most of these families do not engage in child maltreatment, they often lack sufficient resources—an issue that long has plagued families who are reported for child neglect. Child Neglect, Inequity, & Poverty: Practice Innovations, Concrete Resources, and Justice brings to light the critical needs of families who are vulnerable and their economic and concrete resource challenges. Solid arguments, along with research, showcase the need for more investments in families—especially families in poverty—who are at risk of being reported for child neglect. Innovative models of practice in both public and Tribal child welfare are featured, as are integrative approaches involving behavioral health and economic supports.

The CWLA NATIONAL BLUEPRINT

FOR EXCELLENCE IN CHILD WELFARE

The CWLA National Blueprint serves as a foundation for our Standards of Excellence and a framework for all children, youth and families to flourish.

Although the formal child welfare system has a specific role to play for children who have been or are at risk of abuse and neglect, responsibility for the well-being of children and youth extends well beyond traditional child welfare. By aspiring to the standards detailed in the CWLA National Blueprint, families, individuals, communities, providers, and other organizations can create the greatest opportunities for all children and youth to succeed and flourish. It is only by achieving a vision for all children and youth that the most vulnerable among them can flourish.

CARE Creating Conditions for Change

THIRD EDITION By Martha J. Holden

The CARE program model is built on six principles that form the foundation for creating conditions for change. This model offers a framework for practice that enables caring adults and staff at all levels of the organization to provide such an experience. These core principles: developmentally focused, family-involved, relationship-based, competence centered, trauma-informed, and ecologically oriented lay the groundwork for everyone to work cohesively in the best interests of the children in their care.

Children and Residential Experiences: Creating Conditions for Change

SECOND EDITION

By Martha J. Holden

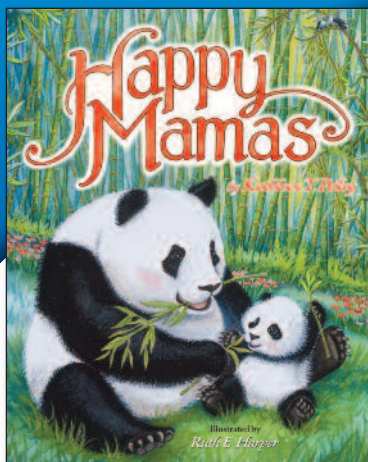

The Second Edition is still available and in stock for agencies and individuals who have tailored their training to this earlier edition.

The CARE practice model provides a framework for residential care based on a valid theory of how children change and develop, motivating both children and staff to adhere to routines, structures, and processes, minimizing the potential for interpersonal conflict. The core principles of the model have a strong research and/or theoretical relationship to positive child outcomes, and can be incorporated into a wide variety of programs and treatment models.

The Giant King

By Kathleen T. Pelley

Proceeds from the sale of each book support CWLA and the Makumbi Children's Home for AIDS orphans in Zimbabwe.

Some people say that Rabbie, the carpenter's son, is a dreamer, but Rabbie says he works from his heart, carving "not what is, but what could be." When Rabbie goes to a distant town to sell his carvings, he finds the town besieged by a fierce and destructive giant. The townspeople despair, but Rabbie suggests that if the giant were treated like a king, he might behave like one. Readers will be charmed by the message of this heartwarming Scottish fable: that what is loved will reveal its loveliness. Author Kathleen Pelley is a native of Scotland and a former teacher. Illustrated by Maurie J. Manning. Ages 1-8. Hardcover.

Promotion of Latino and Hispanic Child and Family Well-Being

Guest Editors: Robert Ortega and Maria L. Quintanilla

This special issue examines the well-being of Latino and Hispanic children in those families that are the subjects of increased stereotypes, biases, and discrimination affecting Latinx communities and resulting in impediments to their basic human rights. There remains a disproportionate representation of Latino and Hispanic children and youth affected by the social conditions in which they are born, grow, live, work, and age across the United States and Puerto Rico. Contributors discuss the extent to which such conditions and systemic responses affect the entrance into child welfare as well as efforts to promote Latino and Hispanic child well-being.

Child Sexual Abuse: Practical Approaches to Prevention and Intervention

Edited by Teresa Huizar and Paul DiLorenzo

“Whether you are a Children’s Advocacy Center leader, victim advocate, police officer, forensic interviewer, therapist, pediatrician, prosecutor, caseworker, or other child abuse professional, this book was created for you. ... We have effective tools to reduce human suffering as a result of child sexual abuse so that survivors can truly thrive in their adulthood.”

— Teresa Huizar, co-editor

“We have created a consensus on the need to provide children and the adults who care for them with the right tools for prevention and protection. Today, young people under the age of 18 are better off because we have built guardrails into the systems meant to care for them. ... We’ve done better when it comes to protecting kids, but we are far from declaring victory—in large part because the factors contributing to sexual abuse remain a stubborn reality.”

Child Sexual Abuse Investigations and Assessments: Providing Safety, Trauma Reduction, and Future Well-Being to Children and Families

Edited by Gerald Walsh, Andrew Koster and Delphine Collin-Vézina

“This guide is a much-needed and greatly appreciated resource for child protection workers and managers practicing in the child welfare arena. Sexual abuse investigations have always been the dreaded intake—often a worker’s most frightening case assignment. This guide outlines the limitations in child welfare training that contributes to this fear where workers feel inadequate in undertaking this great responsibility.

This work provides a template for decision-making points and critical information to consider within a sexual abuse investigation. A training guide such as this allows us all to learn from the author’s joint experience and knowledge to gain some insight into the complexities of sexual abuse investigations.”

Standards of Excellence for Child Welfare Services

The CWLA Standards of Excellence for Child Welfare Services provide goals for the continuing improvement of services for children and families. The Standards are useful in planning, organizing, and administering services; in establishing state and local licensing requirements; and in determining the requirements for accreditation. Standards provide content for teaching and training child welfare and other related fields, in in-service training and staff development programs, and in the orientation of boards and volunteers. They can help to explain and justify expenditures and budget requests to fundraising bodies, and appropriation requests to legislatures. There are 13 total volumes which make up the Standards of Excellence complete set. All are available in electronic downloadable pdfs at CWLA's online bookstore, www.cwla.org/pubs.

Reflections on Kinship Care: Learnings from the Past, Implications for the Future

Edited by Mark Testa, Robert Hill and Charlene Ingram

This publication provides the reader with a historical perspective of kinship care, current policy and practice, and offers a vision for the future through recommendations. The reflections shared by the contributing authors carry us through the development of kinship care as a child welfare service intended to support the maintenance of connections for children and youth with their network of family members. The authors, in sharing their personal and professional perspectives highlight practice values, relevant legislation and policy, research and, support and advocacy for caregivers whether involved, or not, in the child welfare system.

Kinship Navigators: Profiles of Family Connections Projects

Edited by Gerard Wallace, Liliana Hernandez, and Julie Treinen

The Fostering Connections to Success and Increasing Adoptions Act of 2008 established grants to fund kinship navigator programs, which connect children involved with child welfare to grandparent or relative caregivers and help those caregivers identify and access needed programs and services. Kinship Navigators highlights the work of the seven kinship navigator Family Connection Grant projects, providing a closer view of the programs and services and the children and families that they serve.

Traditions of CARING & COLLABORATING

A Trauma-Informed Model of Practice for Engaging, Assessing, and Supporting Kinship Caregiving Families

By Eileen Mayers Pasztor, DSW, Donna D. Petras, PhD, MSW, Charlene Ingram, MSW, and Eshale Williams, PsyD, LMFT

CWLA's Traditions of Caring and Collaborating: A Trauma-Informed Model of Practice for Engaging, Assessing, and Supporting Kinship Caregiving Families provides public and non-profit child welfare agencies with a standardized framework to help direct-service staff use a strength-based approach to working with relatives who are caring for their younger family members. TCC has a research-based conceptual framework that identifies nine issues of concern for kinship caregivers and agency staff who work with them, five competencies needed to address those issues, and four phases of working together to address all aspects of child development and family support. Resources include:

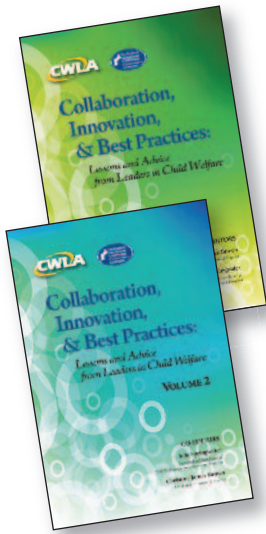

Implementation Guide, providing the foundation for agency staff—from direct services to administrators—to know roles and responsibilities for collaborating with kinship caregivers.

Facilitator's Guide, conducting nine information, support, and assessment meetings for kinship caregivers that can be shared in-person or virtually.

CAREbook, including all the information, support, and assessment resources (i.e. handouts), for participating kinship caregiving families.

Leadership in Child Welfare

Collaboration, Innovation, and Best Practices: Lessons and Advice from Leaders in Child Welfare Volume I and Volume 2

Edited by Christine James-Brown and Julie Springwater

Collaboration, Innovation, and Best Practices: Lessons and Advice from Leaders in Child Welfare, is an essay collection written by retired and active public agency child welfare commissioners and directors to share their experiences with their peers. The purpose of asking a group of retired and active commissioners and directors to write about their experiences is to provide a different type of opportunity for networking and peer-to-peer learning. Who better to talk about how to take on these important roles than people who have been in their positions for a considerable amount of time? We tried to identify people who could write from a variety of perspectives and who have faced a variety of challenges. While each of their stories is unique, they hold common themes.

Becoming the Change We Seek: Stories from CEOs in the Voluntary Sector

Edited by Kate O'Day and Tammy Mello

Becoming the Change We Seek: Stories from CEOs in the Voluntary Sector, is a collection of essays “focused on—and dedicated to—the executive and voluntary leadership of child and family services organizations. Its purpose is to highlight the unique history, capacity, contributions, and future promise of this extraordinary and long-standing movement” (Kate O'Day, foreword). Eight CEOs of child- and family-serving organizations discuss their career journeys, lessons learned, and hopes for the future of child welfare.

Reflections on Child Welfare Areas of Practice, Issues, and Service Populations: Sociological Autobiographies Volume I and Volume 2

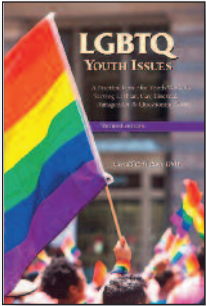

Introduction by Christine James-Brown

This collection—the first and second in a multi-part series—includes personal reflections on child welfare practice and policy by leaders in the field. These essays offer insights and discuss major policy developments, reflections on changes in practice over the years, and where we are today related to selected child welfare areas of practice, program, policy, issues, and services to selected populations. Contributors discuss changes in the external environment or in family structure that contribute to children entering the child welfare system; changes in knowledge, policies, and funding that impact how children and families are served; and more; and connect their work to the tenets of CWLA's National Blueprint for Excellence in Child Welfare.

LGBTQ Youth Issues:

A Practical Guide for Youth Workers Serving Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, & Questioning Youth

THIRD EDITION

By Gerald P. Mallon

LGBTQ Youth Issues brings relevant research and clinical practice into focus for youth-serving professionals. Youth who are LGBTQ often are an invisible population, but every youth-serving organization has clients who identify as lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, or questioning. With a combination of practice tips, proven research, and case narratives, this book is a helpful guide for workers who want to address the needs of youth who may be confronting challenges in their families, at school, in out-of-home care, or in the wider community. This edition gives particular focus to youth who are LGBTQ and are runaways or homeless, and youth in juvenile justice settings. In addition, this edition focuses on creating healthy social, dating, and relationship environments for youth who are LGBTQ. This is a must-have book for all youth-serving professionals.

Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Trans Foster & Adoptive Parents:

Recruiting, Assessing, and Supporting an Untapped Resource for Children and Youth

By Gerald P. Mallon

This publication provides guidelines for working with lesbian, gay, bisexual, and trans people interested in fostering or adopting. Although a growing number of LGBT people are applying to foster or adopt and are successfully caring for children and youth, they remain, in some parts of the nation, an underutilized resource. With a national shortfall of foster and adoptive placements, and a national strategy to recruit and support foster and adoptive parents, agencies need to ensure that they do not prejudice lesbian, gay, bisexual, and trans applicants from coming forward as potential foster or adoptive resources for children and youth in need.

Facing Teenage Pregnancy: A Handbook for the Pregnant Teen (Revised)

By Patricia Roles

This highly regarded handbook was written expressly to help adolescents make their own decisions about their pregnancies. Using a supportive, nondirective approach, it does not advocate any particular solution to the dilemma of teenage pregnancy. It does, however, offer various alternatives as it guides the teen through considering each available option. Although primarily addressed to the pregnant teen and the significant people in her life, Facing Teenage Pregnancy will also prove very useful to the adopted teenager who is troubled by thoughts about being adopted.

What We Know about Meeting the Needs of Teens and Young Adults

Guest Editors: Cassandra Simmel & Victoria Kelly

Teens and young adults account for about 25% of the general population but make up more than 34% of individuals in foster care. Ample research has documented the experiences of youth who exit the child welfare system — many depart the system ill-prepared for life on their own, devoid of family and other environmental supports to help them. This two-part special issue of CWLA's Child Welfare journal delves into the challenges facing older teens and young adults as they navigate the foster care system, age out, and prepare for adulthood.

THE CWLA CHILDREN'S MEMORIAL FLAG INITIATIVE

The centerpiece is simple. A red flag depicting blue, paper-doll-like figures of children holding hands. In the center, the white chalk outline of a missing child symbolizes the children lost to violence. Created by a 16-year-old student in Alameda County, California, and flown on the fourth Friday in April, the Children's Memorial Flag honors each lost child and raises public awareness about the continuing problem of violence against children.

Join the nearly 300 organizations, in over 100 cities, and participants in all 50 states that support Children's Memorial Flag Day. Fly your flag on the fourth Friday in April—or all year long—and support CWLA's efforts to protect every child from violence and harm.

The Next Generation PRIDE Model of Practice

Preparing and Assessing Prospective Resource Parents as Team Members in Child Protection and the Trauma Informed Care of Children

CWLA has been a leader for decades for strategies to recruit, develop, assess, support, and retain foster or resource parents as team members in meeting the safety, well-being, and permanency needs of children in their care.

This 2025 Next Generation PRIDE Model of Practice builds on the previous New Generation edition by adding enhancements recommended by colleagues from public and private agencies across the U.S. and other countries. Their experiences in and commitment to working with our PRIDE Model of Practice are respected and valued.

Over many years they have changed the lives of children and families across the country and internationally. In collaboration with CWLA's training and publications team, content revisions have been added to both the Facilitator's Guide and the PRIDEbook. Updates and revisions have been organized around the following six themes:

1. Using strength based and person first words and expressions.
2. Ensuring a focus on diversity, equity, inclusion, and belonging.
3. Expanding trauma to focus on situational, generational, historical, and environmental dynamics.
4. Adding ways to be respectful of sexual orientation, gender identity, and expression
5. Offering safety tips revisions and updated information on home safety tips for child safety
6. Providing an expanded section on social media safety for all children in resource families.

Protecting Our Children: Domestic Minor Sex Trafficking Training for Out-of-Home Care Providers

By Emily Wampler, MSW, LSW

This curriculum utilizes a train-the-trainer model, and was designed for social workers and other professional and paraprofessionals to engage others in learning how to identify, report, and prevent Domestic Minor Sex Trafficking (DMST) in the community at large and in out-of-home care (OHC) settings (foster care, residential facilities, group homes, drop-in centers, homeless shelters, juvenile justice settings, aftercare programming).

The OHC target audience for the curriculum was chosen due to the frequent contact these providers have with victims, and due to their ability to make a difference. However, the train-the-trainer model also can be used by concerned citizens and for individual, personal, and professional development in regard to outreach education.

Global Perspectives on Child Protection and Neglect

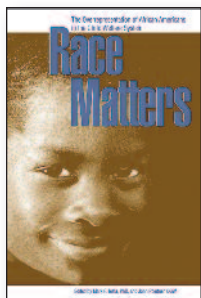

Guest Editors: Katharine Briar-Lawson, Christine James-Brown and Donna Petras

This special issue of CWLA's Child Welfare journal focuses on child welfare research, best practices, and innovation to promote more family-supportive interventions by systems in the United States and nations across the world. This issue's contributors—hailing from Africa, India, Europe, Asia, Australia, and the Americas—bring attention to the significance of poverty and income/resource insufficiency related to child neglect and the challenges faced by child protection systems. Their work also discusses the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic, the health and social justice needs of children and families who are vulnerable, and efforts to support those disproportionately affected by this health crisis.

Racial Disproportionality In Child Welfare

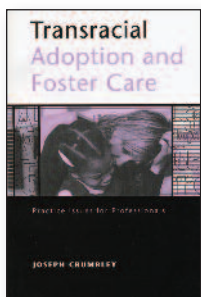

Race Matters in Child Welfare: The Overrepresentation of African American Children in the System

Edited by Mark F. Testa and John Poertner

Several studies show that children of different ethnic or racial backgrounds receive dissimilar treatment by the child welfare system, but little is known about the appropriateness of the treatment. This compilation of papers critically examines child welfare policy and practice, the causes of child maltreatment, and how each impacts the disproportionate representation of African American children in the system.

Working with Traumatized Children

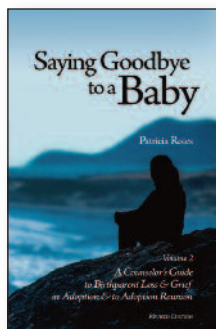

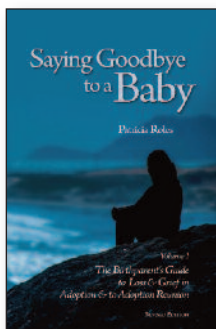

A Handbook for Healing THIRD EDITION

by Kathryn Brohl

This practical Handbook is for anyone who works with children who have been traumatized—teachers, parents, as well as professionals. It provides needed information to understand and guide a child suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) through to recovery. It describes the physical and emotional effects of trauma, shows how to recognize maladaptive reactions, and offers specific strategies for treating its effects. Readers will especially appreciate its in-depth discussion of PTSD in abused and children who have been neglected. Simply written and practical in orientation, Working with Traumatized Children offers an effective, step-by-step process for helping to heal the child traumatized by neglect and abuse. The Companion Workbook is directed at child welfare professionals and volunteers who want to understand and compassionately work with children and youth through interactive exercises that can be applied to both group settings and individual practitioners. Chapters focus on understanding trauma and its symptoms, partnering with parents, managing worker burnout, building resilience, and more.

Child Maltreatment in Insular and Isolated Communities

Prepared by CWLA and The Field Center

This essay collection tackles the issue of underrepresentation of groups or communities who infrequently come into contact with the child welfare system.

Often, individuals, groups, and communities that may experience maltreatment remain unknown, isolated, and insular to researchers and policy-makers alike. Who comprises these groups? Do they remain insulated because child maltreatment occurs less infrequently? And if so, what protective factors or evidence-informed strategies decrease child maltreatment in these communities? Alternatively, if abuse is prevalent in some insular communities, why is it not being detected or reported to child welfare agencies? This essay collection serves as an initial platform to address these timely questions and generate new ideas for research to increase awareness of child maltreatment in insular and isolated communities.

Can You Hear Me Smiling?

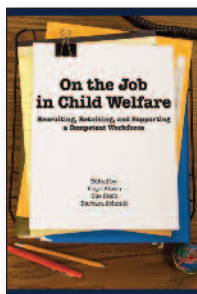

By Aariane R. Jackson

The death of a sibling is among the most traumatic losses a child can endure, and yet few resources exist to help children address this unique and devastating experience and its aftermath. In Can You Hear Me Smiling?, Aariane Jackson, the book's 9-year-old author, recounts with honesty, tenderness, and courage the story of her older sister's illness and passing. Aariane's heartfelt narrative gently leads young readers through the range of emotions she experienced during this difficult time: from a very close sibling relationship that nonetheless had its share of squabbles to Aariane's confusion, guilt, and fear regarding Londee's illness- and through a little girl's intense grief at the loss of her sister to her gradual sense of understanding, acceptance, and peace. With a preface by Aariane and Londee's mother and an afterword by two leading children's grief therapists, Can You Hear Me Smiling? communicates to young survivors of a sibling death that they are not alone.

What Works in Child Welfare: Revised Edition

Edited by Patrick A. Curtis and Gina Alexander

What Works in Child Welfare is the culmination of a body of research covering successfully implemented strategies in the field of child welfare. This time around the authors have framed their work in the context of evidence-based practices (EBP). A wealth of information, this 548-page resource is divided into six sections: prevention, child protective services, out-of-home care, adoption, child welfare and integrated services, and technology—also new to this edition.

Strategic Child Welfare Agency-University Partnerships to Advance Workforce Development

By Gary R. Anderson and Katharine Briar-Lawson

“This book is a must-read for child welfare practitioners, researchers, educators, and students. It contains 17 chapters that may impact on the professionalization of the child welfare workforce. The authors highlight several contributions to: reframe the service agenda; prioritize and expand workforce development strategies; build partnerships; foster organizational change; address racial equity and inclusion; initiate a data-driven system to address continuous quality improvement; foster workforce excellence; generate workforce support; ensure worker competencies; ease the school-to-work transition; and build a resilient workforce. These contributions are detailed, future-oriented plans for improving work-force quality through strategic partnerships.”

Systems Consultation When Trauma Strikes

Stories of Hope, Collaboration, and Change

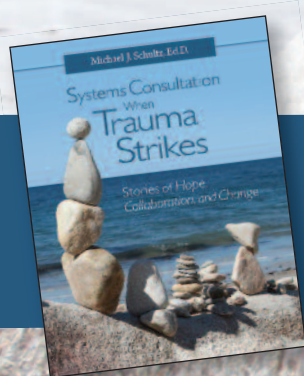

SECOND EDITION By Michael J. Schultz, Ed.D.

This second, enlarged edition of Systems Consultation When Trauma Strikes: Stories of Hope, Collaboration, and Change expands upon the first edition's case examples, principles, and practices into the realm of implementation of the Five-Step Approach (1) fostering physical and psychological safety, trust, and containment of intensive emotions; (2) constructing a context of structure and support; (3) normalizing experiences via education and validation; (4) empowering individuals and the group, and (5) marking transitions and learning through therapeutic approaches. This edition also includes assessments and interventions within and across public and private organizations via interdisciplinary teaching seminars, state and national conferences, systems consultation with government agencies, and personal coaching and mentoring. Case examples demonstrate the power and utility of the experiential and interpersonal approach in pragmatic ways for administrators, helping professionals, and policy-makers who are confronted with daily crises and trauma across interdisciplinary contexts.
